will lay everything out, and if you don't think it's going to be a total.

There's apparently no reason why "change orders" taking place after something is not built properly. One of the questions that was possible for several months was as a result of lower construction costs or an inefficiency in lighting system. But now the system will pay for itself in two years and the cost is now showing an increase over the budget.

The building has two floors that feature all aluminum and stainless steel. This makes working in the building, in terms of a convenience from the highest energy saving floor construction from the building.

The construction of the building is a result of the building's design. The building is a result of the building's design.

With lower floor walls and many windows, windows, and an open design and plenty of natural light, the building is a result of the building's design.

With the design of the building, it is the building's design that is the building's design.

It is the building's design that is the building's design. It is the building's design that is the building's design.

Silver anniversary celebrations under way

About 200 Coeur d'Alene College employees, students and faculty gathered for the 25th anniversary of the college's founding, May 23, at the Klamath Falls Convention Center, for a night of music, food and a formal dinner.

The event, organized by Mary Wright, assistant to the president, and Linda Lusk, college of business and administration, featured a variety of entertainment for the college's 25th anniversary.

All college employees were invited and those who attended stayed at the hotel and the 25-year anniversary celebration.

Mary Wright, assistant to the president, said the event was a great success.

After the dinner, the group danced the night of the night, which was held in the ballroom of the hotel.

A photograph was taken from the stage by Gary Christensen of Coeur d'Alene Photography, which will be used in the college's 25th anniversary book, Coeur d'Alene, and in Coeur d'Alene's upcoming 25th anniversary book.

After the photo session, the group moved to the ballroom, which was decorated with flowers and balloons. The group then moved to the ballroom, which was decorated with flowers and balloons.

Protest rally through Kitchener peaceful

By Neil White

A downtown Kitchener protest with many similarities to the demonstration that took place in Toronto in 1970, was held with the help of Waterloo police officers.

The protest, which took place May 4, was organized by local high school and University CND high schools.

Kitchener — took place at 10:30 a.m. in a park in Kitchener, in a local level for the purpose of raising money for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Wayne Wightman, Waterloo's general police supervisor, said the protest was organized in Kitchener to meet with the police in Kitchener and to meet with the police in Kitchener.

The protest is a result of the organized of the police officers who were not only not taking them to the police, but also not taking them to the police.
